DR. PAUL KNOX

"Paul Knox has always been the go-to church musician in the roles as educator, mentor, artist, and choral scholar for students, peers, and clergy," says John Polo, Professional Concerns Chair for the Greater Bridgeport Chapter of the American Guild of Organists. "He has been a tireless champion of helping both the chapter's full-time and part-time musicians, for all faiths, and therefore has become beloved by so many."

Knox, who began piano lessons at the age of five, says he remembers well how he became "intrigued" by the sound of the organ as a seven-year-old attending services at his parents' Methodist church. "Sitting there hearing the organ ... the sound just grabbed me." And it has never let him go, he says. He "began bugging the church organist for lessons, but she said my legs were too short to reach the pedals." By age nine, "she relented," and Knox began his life-long adventure with the instrument.

Knox received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Organ Performance from the University of North Texas and a Master of Arts degree in Music from Manhattan's Union Theological Seminary. (Its sacred music department later affiliated with Yale University to become the Institute of Sacred Music.) He also did post-graduate work at Columbia University. He moved to Connecticut in the mid-1960s to teach part-time at the University of Bridgeport and to become the full-time director of music at United Congregational Church in Bridgeport. There, Knox led as many as seven choirs of singers, bells and recorders, in addition to directing the church's music concert series. He also hosted numerous concerts and programs for interfaith and community groups and for the ACO's local chapter. In addition, Knox organized and led several choral concert tours of Europe over the years.

In 1996, at age 65, following 31 years of service at the UCC, Knox retired from full-time work. But the desire to keep busy resurfaced quickly, and for the past 15 years, Knox has worked in various part-time positions as director of music for Trumbull Congregational Church, Golden Hill United Methodist Church in Bridgeport, and finally, First Church Congregational in Fairfield where he remained until the new pipe organ was installed and dedicated late last year. Now at 80 years old, Knox says he wanted "to retire from playing every Sunday morning while he could still smell the roses" ~ although he says he'll be happy to substitute when needed. "The organ picked me; I didn't pick it," he says, laughing, adding: "There's not a lot of money in what we do" as church music directors, "but the rewards are tremendous." "It's been a real joy," he says of his long career.

This concert to salute Paul is also a celebration of the new 36-stop, 41-rank, 3-manual, tracker pipe organ at First Church Fairfield. This is the final of five concerts that have taken place throughout the year for the new organ with more than 2,000 pipes. As is a tradition, the American Guild of Organists present a members recital for new instruments. "Every organist has his or her own unique style," said Peggy Gettig, one of new pipe organ celebration committee members at First Church Congregational Fairfield. "We have enjoyed each of the inaugural concert organists and are excited that for this final concert the AGO has chosen six different noted area local and international recitalists to demonstrate our new pipe organ. For this program, the players at the keyboard will be projected on a large screen so the audience can appreciate what it takes to play the instrument."

Dr. Joe Utterback

First Congregational Church, Stratford, CT / Sacred Heart University, Fairfield, CT

Dr. Joe is a celebrated American Jazz Pianist, Director of Music for First Congregational Church, Stratford and Adjunct Professor at Sacred Heart University.

Much involved in the New York City music scene, Dr. Joe performs annually for the Tony Awards gala reception, in the lobby of The Empire State Building during the December holiday season, and a weekly gig. In addition to his numerous appearances in Fairfield County, Connecticut, the artist gives frequent solo concerts throughout the United States, at times participating in radio interviews before these concerts. Dr. Joe often presents improvisation workshops at regional and national conventions of such groups as the American Guild of Organists and the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Joe's career in the recording industry dates from 1960's vinyl. The pianist, already recognized for his improvisations, recorded Christmas Eve at the Wurlitzer on the soon-to-be demolished theater organ in Wichita's doomed Miller Theater. Nearly thirty years later in 1996, Connoisseur Society, Inc. released Joe's first solo jazz piano CD, Gershwin: Porgy and Bess Jazz Suite. Five additional Connoisseur CDs followed: Blues and Ballads at the Movies, Night & Day, Christmas on the Mountain, Night Train and Stardust. In 2004, Joe recorded Dr. Joe's JAZZ GOSPEL and Jazz Dreamz under his own publishing label Jazzmuze, Inc. In June 2005, Connoisseur released Stardust, recorded right after 9/11. With wonderful ballads, the CD is late night listening par excellence! Joe is also actively involved in local studio work, recording with New York City cabaret singers.

An internationally recognized composer, Joe has created jazz-influenced works for piano, organ, harpsichord, voice, and instrumental combinations, which have won him ASCAP awards annually since 1991. His more than 225 compositions have been performed in concert venues and in church services worldwide. Recordings of his compositions include Skyscape (Arktos) by the Canadian Duo Majoya; Spirituals and Rags: Jazz Harpsichord (AFKA) by Australian-born harpsichordist Audley Green; utterbackanalia (Jazzmuze, Inc.) by English organist Andrew Shenton; Concert Fantasy on Gershwin's Porgy & Bess (Connoisseur Society, Inc.) by pianist David Allen Wehr. Orgelbau Klais is a German firm that designs, builds and restores pipe organs. It is a family run company, founded in 1882 by Johannes Klais senior and is now run by his great-grandson Philipp Klais.

The firm is based in Bonn, Germany, and has completed many large-scale building and restoration projects around the globe in more than a century of organ building

Johannes Klais studied organ building in Alsace, Switzerland and Southern Germany. He founded his own organ building workshop in Bonn in 1882. His way of building organs was closely bound up with traditional construction methods using slider wind chests. But as early as before the turn of the century he built high pressure stops with two mouths on pneumatic cone valve chests.

In 1906, together with his son Hans, he introduced electric action. Hans Klais took over in 1925. In his time facade design began to come under the influence of the modern age and ergonomic console designs were also being developed. Hans Gerd Klais, the founder's grandson, took charge in 1965. Philipp Klais, the great-grandson of the founder, studied organ building in Alsace, France; in Germany and overseas. He now runs the company.
